

SentryLock's technology aids in preventing theft at listed properties.

The Customer

Mike Mulneaux manages Alaska Multiple Listing Service (MLS) in South Central Alaska and the Alaskan peninsula, and is one of the few MLS organizations in the U.S. owned by its members.

The Problem

Across the country there has been a widespread issue with theft at homes that are on the market, Alaska is not an exception.

The Solution

SentryLock provides users with reporting on who enters and exits a property, as well as the time. REALTORS® can also control who has access to properties with SentryConnect®. Listing agents can grant time-specific and revocable temporary access to those who don't have full credentials, such as a contractor or home inspector.

"Having the technology to afford peace of mind is part of combating those concerns," said Mulneaux. "MLS members and their clients know their property is secure and the SentryLock's lockbox is able to track who comes and goes from the property."

Mulneaux said he and his members have had great experiences with the SentryConnect® App.

"It's incredibly useful because you can block out the times you're letting people in or out of a property, and it's incredibly intuitive and user friendly," he said. "SentryLock is always keeping up with the times, and our members appreciate being empowered to do that as well."

At a Glance

Customer: Alaska Multiple Listing Service

Problem: Security for listed homes on market of lockboxes deployed: 5,197

Contact a SentryLock representative or visit sentrylock.com/contact to learn more.